Section 2. The Legislature finds that it is a public necessity that the home addresses, telephone numbers, dates of birth, and photographs of current or former impaired practitioner consultants who are retained by an agency or current or former employees of an impaired practitioner consultant whose duties result in a determination of a person's skill and safety to practice a licensed profession; that the names, home addresses, telephone numbers, and places of employment of the spouses and children of such consultants and their employees; and that the names and locations of schools and day care facilities attended by the children of such consultant and employees be exempt from public records requirements if the consultant or employee has made reasonable efforts to protect such information from being accessible through other means available to the public. An impaired practitioner consultant assists the state and its regulatory boards in implementing an impaired practitioner treatment program. The consultant provides the necessary resources to evaluate and monitor program compliance of licensees, applicants for licensure, and students enrolled in prelicensure education programs who could be impaired and, as a result, unable to practice with reasonable skill and safety to the public. A person who is referred to the program, but who, in the opinion of the consultant, based on treatment and compliance monitoring information, fails to successfully complete its requirements or is an immediate, serious threat to public safety is at risk of failing to obtain or losing the license that is necessary to engage in his or her chosen profession. In 2013, a program participant with a history of alcohol abuse and cocaine dependence traveled 250 miles across the state to confront his compliance monitor in the driveway of her home. Another program participant threatened a bomb attack on a program office and physical harm to its employees. As a result of these incidents and other telephone threats, the Legislature finds that release of identifying and location information could place an impaired practitioner consultant or an employee of a consultant whose duties result in a determination of a person's skill and safety to practice a licensed profession, or the spouses and children of such consultants or their employees in danger of being physically or emotionally harmed or stalked by a person who has a hostile reaction to a recommendation, report, or conclusion provided by a consultant or an employee of a consultant in the determination of whether the practitioner is impaired. The Legislature further finds that the harm that may result from the release of such identifying and location information outweighs any public benefit that may be derived from the disclosure of the information.

Section 3. This act shall take effect upon becoming a law.
